7. Description, Page One

The Tilghmanton Historic District is a linear, rural area of seventy-five acres, located along the Sharpsburg Pike in Election District No. 12 (the "Tilghmanton District") of Washington County, in western Maryland, approximately ten miles south of Hagerstown, the county seat. The district is nearly exclusively residential in character and consists of small-scale, generally modest and typically vernacular, buildings built of log, wood frame, brick, and concrete block. Associated with most of the homes are outbuildings including barns, smokehouses, animal pens, and automobile garages. For the purpose of this documentation, larger dependencies, such as auto garages, smokehouses, and barns, are counted within the resource count, while smaller outbuildings are treated as uncounted landscape features. Some properties have fieldstone and concrete retaining walls encircling the perimeter of their lots; these, too, are treated as uncounted landscape features but clearly contribute to the overall residential character of the district. In addition to the residences and their associated dependencies, two important non-residential buildings are located within the district: the 1913 Fair Play School on Tilghmanton Road; Resource No. 106) and the c. 1860 Bloom's General Store (8013 Sharpsburg Pike; Resource No. 31).

A total of 110 buildings are found within the Tilghmanton Historic District. Of these, 82 (74%) contribute to the character of the district and 28 (26%) are non-contributing. Contributing buildings are those built within the Period of Significance of the district (c. 1830-c.1930) whose architectural integrity has not been irreparably compromised by incompatible alterations. Non-contributing buildings date from outside the Period of Significance and/or have been seriously compromised by incompatible physical modifications. Typical alterations to buildings within the district include the application of synthetic siding, window replacement, and the removal of distinctive features such as trim and porches. No particular portion of the district contains a preponderance of non-contributing resources. Contributing and non-contributing resources are identified both on the district map and on the Resource Inventory which accompanies the nomination documents.

The buildings in the Tilghmanton Historic District are one and two stories in height and are rectilinear in form, including simple rectangular houses and gabled ells. Foundation materials include coursed ashlar stone, rubble stone, or concrete block. Most properties are roofed with gable roofs, set either laterally or gable-end-oriented to the street. Roofing material includes slate, asphalt shingle, and standing-seam metal. Original exterior and interior chimneys of brick or stone punctuate many of the rooflines; several properties exhibit newer exterior chimneys of concrete block, likely installed along with central heating systems. Fenestration employs flat-topped forms; some windows have multi-light sash, but most have one-over-one- and two-over-two-light configurations. The property at 7902 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource No. 87) retains a locally-distinctive two-over-two sash pattern wherein the sash is flat-topped but the two upper sash lights are segmental-arched.¹

The Tilghmanton Historic District is comprised of modestly-sized building lots which correspond to the overall lack of pretension of the homes within the district. Most buildings are situated near the front of their respective lots and have side-yard setbacks of varying sizes. Some homes on the Sharpsburg Pike, particularly those near the intersection of the Pike and Tilghmanton Road, sit unusually close to the roadway because of past highway widenings. A diverse collection of outbuildings dots the cultural landscape of the district, executed in brick, wood, and concrete block, with wood predominating.

The topography of the district is undulating. Although plantings within the district follow no formal landscape plan, a variety of mature trees is found throughout. The area is generally devoid of pedestrian amenities such as sidewalks. One principal roadway and three secondary roadways traverse the district; all are paved with asphalt. The Sharpsburg Pike (Maryland Route 65) bisects the district in a southwest-to-northeast direction with a right-of-way typical of state highways. Intersecting the Sharpsburg Pike are Herr Street, which enters the district from the southwest and terminates at the Sharpsburg Pike, Tilghmanton Road, which enters the district from the northwest and also terminates at the Sharpsburg Pike, and Fairplay Road, which enters the district from the west and becomes Manor Church Road when it crosses the Sharpsburg Pike near the northern terminus of the district. The latter three roadways exhibit more of a "neighborhood" character, with shallow berms and relatively narrow cartways.

Architecturally, the majority of the homes within the district are vernacular in character, with little or no formal stylistic antecedents. The few homes whose design suggests a formal architectural style draw from the Federal style and the Colonial and Dutch Colonial Revival styles. "Rosemont," located at 8105 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource No. 9), is a c. 1830 home which includes an original log portion eventually cased in brick and exhibiting a three-bay hall-and-parlor Federal-style facade. The residences at 8168 and 8225 Sharpsburg Pike (Resources No. 104 and 1, respectively) are of the Colonial Revival style, and 8002 and 8117 Sharpsburg Pike (Resources No. 99 and 7, respectively) are of Dutch Colonial Revival-style derivation, with the stylistically-distinctive gambrel roof. The Fairplay School on Fairplay Road (Resource No. 106) is of the Colonial Revival style.

The overall character of the Tilghmanton Historic District is that of a mid-nineteenth-century rural hamlet, located along an important linear artery--the Hagerstown-Sharpsburg Pike--consisting of vernacular residences of modest scale and unpretentious ornamentation.

¹The genesis of this distinctive sash pattern is not known. It has been noted throughout Hagerstown and other settlements in proximity to Tilghmanton and may have been the product of a local planing mill.

8. Significance, Page One

The Tilghmanton Historic District is documented with reference to National Register Criterion C, for architecture, as a reasonably intact and visually cohesive mid-nineteenth-century rural western Maryland village. The district contains a grouping of modest vernacular homes reflecting the traditions and design preferences of working-class settlers along the Hagerstown-Sharpsburg Pike during the years between c. 1830 and the early years of the twentieth century. Included within the district's inventory of historic resources are log homes which represent the earliest settlement architecture of the village, a collection of modest vernacular homes built without reference to any architectural style, two Federal-style houses, four residences executed in the Colonial Revival and Dutch Colonial Revival style, one early commercial building representing the limited and strictly local mercantile life of the hamlet, and one early twentieth-century schoolhouse. The Period of Significance of the district begins c. 1830 (the approximate date of construction of the settlement's earliest buildings) and extends to c. 1930, when the last of Tilghmanton's historic buildings were erected. This documentation supplants Maryland Historical Trust Inventory Form WA-II-152, which contained minimal documentation and narrative treatment describing either the history or appearance of the area.

The village of Tilghmanton was named for Col. Frisby (also spelled "Frisbi") Tilghman (1774-1847), who, as a young man, came to Washington County late in the eighteenth century from Maryland's eastern shore. He began to acquire property in the area until his holdings exceeded 1,100 acres. In 1807 he was appointed judge of the Orphan's Court of Washington County. Little was ever recorded about the settlement or developmental history of Tilghmanton, beyond a brief note in a nineteenth-century county history which asserted that Frisby Tilghman "laid out the town into lots for poor people."² No corroboration for this statement exists, and some local historians tend to debunk this notion. Tilghman's own residence, "Rockland," is located approximately one mile north of the settlement which bears his name.

The area's first permanent European settler was one John Smith, who arrived from Hancock in 1810. The hamlet was not established until 1834 and developed slowly, never growing beyond the scale and status of an unincorporated rural village.³ Tilghmanton likely owes its existence to its location on the Hagerstown-Sharpsburg Pike (now Sharpsburg Pike, Maryland Route 65), which links the county seat of Hagerstown to Sharpsburg, near the Potomac River. An 1859 map of Washington County⁴ (Figure 2), showed Tilghmanton as a linear settlement of about a dozen buildings. A history of Washington County in the Civil War made no mention of Tilghmanton's having had any association with the nearby Battle of Antietam. By the late 1870s, when the Illustrated Atlas of Washington County⁵ was published, the village was shown to contain fewer than fifty buildings (Figure 3).

The 1870 Census showed Tilghmanton to have developed as a working-class rural community; occupations reported in the Census included "farm laborer," "farmer," and "day laborer;" women were exclusively recorded as "keeping house." The settlement retained this general character throughout the Period of Significance. The aforementioned county atlas included a list of citizens of the Tilghmanton Election District, but it reveals little as to the identity of the population of the hamlet itself. When compared to the atlas map, the list identified nurseryman and farmer H. N. Cross (who was a Washington County native born in 1842) as one of the citizens of Tilghmanton, along with magistrate J. H. Wade, a Virginian who came to Washington County in 1832. The other individuals identified in the list were not shown on the map.

Prior to the publication of the county atlas, a schoolhouse had been erected along the road between Tilghmanton and its sister village, Fairplay (also spelled as "Fair Play"), located less than a mile to the west. The nineteenth-century schoolhouse was replaced in 1913 with a new brick building executed in the Colonial Revival style. Although the school is much closer to Tilghmanton than to Fairplay, it is nonetheless named for the latter. The namestone over the main door identifies the 1913 building as "Dis. No. 12 School No. 4." It is presently vacant with an uncertain future.

With respect to the Tilghmanton Historic District's Criterion C significance for architecture, the district stands as a locally-significant assemblage of small-scale, primarily residential, architecture, along with one commercial building and one schoolhouse, all built during the years between the turn of the nineteenth century and c. 1930. The district reflects the settlement architecture of rural western Maryland, and draws generally from traditional vernacular design tenets (such as log construction) rather than from elite stylistic influences. The community's vernacular homes were erected by anonymous house-builders or by their original owners themselves, and reflect the simplicity of design and overall absence of pretension which typify rural settlement architecture throughout this part of the county. Examples of the vernacular domestic architecture which characterizes the Tilghmanton Historic District include 8103 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource No. 3), 8039 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource No. 15), 8031 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource No. 19), 7821 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource No. 53), and the adjacent log houses at 7729 and 7727 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource Nos. 64 and 65, respectively) and the c. 1840 two-bay stone house at 7928 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource No. 66). The district's single example of historic institutional architecture is the Fairplay School of 1913, executed in the Colonial Revival style. Commercial design is represented by the Bloom General Store at 8013 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource No. 31).

As noted above, influence from formal architectural design is nearly absent for most residential resources of the district. Two buildings, "Rosemont" (8105 Sharpsburg Pike; Resource No. 9) and 8019 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource No. 26) exhibit some characteristics of Federal-style design including their massing, fenestration, roof orientation, and ornamentation. "Rosemont," the district's most elaborate early building, began as a log house and was eventually cased in brick, with a three-bay hall-and-parlor facade (It was previously documented on Maryland Historical Trust Inventory Form WA-II-1127). The home at 7909 Sharpsburg Pike is of wood construction and also features a three-bay facade with an offset entrance suggesting a hall-and-parlor floor plan. The homes at 8225 and 8168 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource Nos. 1 and 104, respectively) are of Colonial Revival design, and 8001 and 8002 Sharpsburg Pike (Resource Nos. 17 and 99, respectively) are of Dutch Colonial Revival design, incorporating the gambrel roof form which defines this particular early twentieth-century American revival style.

Taken as a whole, this district addresses Criterion C registration requirements on a local level as a representative of a small-scale, rural hamlet dating from the second third of the nineteenth century and containing a variety of generally vernacular domestic architecture. The overall character of the district is far less pretentious than that found in other Washington County National Register districts, including the far more urbanized districts in Hagerstown (such as the Hagerstown Commercial Core Historic District [NR 1/17/83] or the Hagerstown Historic District [NR 2/2/94]). The district's small-scale design and overall lack of architectural ornamentation clearly conveys its overriding character as a collection of working-class settlement architecture in this portion of western Maryland.

Figure 3 This excerpt from the 1887 An Illustrated Atlas of Washington County, Maryland (Philadelphia: Lake, Griffing, & Stephenson) shows the rural hamlet character of the village of Tilghmanton, which has remained essentially unaltered throughout the life of the settlement. The Pike runs from the southwest to the northeast, Tilghmanton Road intersects the Pike roughly at the center of the community, and Fairplay Road/Manor Church Road intersect at the northern reaches of the settlement. The scale has been altered due to the enlargement of the map.

RESOURCE INVENTORY

The following properties lie within the Tilghmanton Historic District. The numbers for the properties are keyed to the district map which accompanies the nomination documents. All resources are considered to be contributing to the character of the district except those which are marked "NC," indicating their status as non-contributing resources.

1. 8225 Sharpsburg Pike: Two-story Colonial Revival-style residence of wood construction, vinyl sided, with asymmetrically-arranged five-bay facade. Rubble stone foundation. The windows are flat-topped with exterior shutters. The main entrance is centered on the facade and is shielded by a semi-circular one-story portico with an upper balustrade. A one-story porch on the left side is accessed from both the first and second story. A stand of mature shade trees is in the front yard and the remnants of an orchard are on the left side of the house. The building sits back from the highway, with a macadam driveway enclosed in a stone wall to the left of the house. (c. 1900)
2. 8215 Sharpsburg Pike (U.S. Post Office): Single-story gable-roofed brick governmental building with a gable-end orientation to the street. The building is of modern design and was built outside the period of significance (c. 1970; NC)
3. 8103 Sharpsburg Pike: Two-story vernacular residence of wood frame construction, with an intersecting gable roof of standing-seam metal roof. The house has a three-bay facade with a centered entrance and a one-story porch which is set on a stone foundation and trimmed with attenuated replacement metal columns. Windows are flat-topped, 2/2 lights. On the right elevation is an interior gable-end chimney. The exterior is synthetically sided. A chain-link fence extends around a portion of the property. (c. 1840)
4. Rear, 8103 Sharpsburg Pike: One-story masonry outbuilding with gable roof and gable-end orientation to the street, oriented to Manor Church Road
5. Side, 8103 Sharpsburg Pike: One-story masonry garage with a gable roof and gable-end orientation to the street, with a two-bay facade punctuated by overhead garage doors
6. Side, 8117 Sharpsburg Pike: One-story, gable roofed dependency with a weather vane-tipped cupola; gable-end orientation to the street; presently serves as a two-car automobile garage
7. 8117 Sharpsburg Pike: 2-story Dutch Colonial Revival-style residence of wood construction, with a gambrel roof pierced by a large shed dormer on the facade. The facade is three bays in width, and the main entrance, which is offset on the left side, is articulated by a semi-elliptical fan light and side lights; windows are flat-topped, 3/3 lights, set singly and in groups. An exterior gable-end chimney is on the right side (c. 1920)
8. Side, 8117 Sharpsburg Pike: One-story utilitarian outbuilding of wood with a shed roof; five bays in width, it appears to have been originally a chicken coop (c. 1900)
9. 8105 Sharpsburg Pike ["Rosemont"]: This is a three-bay L-shaped Federal-style residence of brick construction, with a laterally-oriented gable roof of standing-seam metal and interior gable-end chimneys. The main entrance is offset on the north side of the facade and is shielded by a modest one-story replacement portico of wood, which is architecturally compatible with the overall character of the building. Windows are flat-topped, with radiating brick voussoirs; the second-story windows on the facade are 6/6 lights, while the first-story

- windows are 2/2 lights, all equipped with operable exterior louvered shutters. Some repointing has been undertaken. On the south elevation is a double-gallery wood porch with sawn brackets and square wood posts. A one-story laterally-oriented gable-roofed dependency on the left of the house has been interconnected with the house by means of a generally compatible passage. (c. 1835)
10. Side, 8105 Sharpsburg Pike: Laterally oriented, gable-roofed garage, 1 ½ stories in height and of wood construction, clad in shiplap siding
11. Side, 8105 Sharpsburg Pike: One-story wood frame dependency, clad in shiplap siding and punctuated by 6/6-light windows
12. Rear, 8105 Sharpsburg Pike: 2½-story gable-roofed wood barn clad with vertical wood siding, to which is appended a single-story shed-roofed addition
13. Rear 8105 Sharpsburg Pike: One-story dependency of indeterminate age and usage
14. Side, 8105 Sharpsburg Pike: One-story outbuilding of indeterminate age and usage
15. 8039 Sharpsburg Pike: Two-story vernacular residence of wood, with interior gable-end chimneys. The house has a laterally-oriented gable roof, of standing-seam metal, with partial returns on the cornice. The facade is of three bays and windows are flat-topped, 2/2 lights. The house has been synthetically sided and synthetic shutters have been applied. The main entrance is centered on the facade with a modest single door. Shielding the first story of the facade is a one-story, hipped-roofed, raised porch with a replacement foundation of rock-faced concrete block. On the north side is a one-story wing with a laterally-oriented gable roof, one bay in width and two bays in depth, set on a foundation of smoothed-dressed concrete block (c. 1860)
16. Side, 8039 Sharpsburg Pike: Single-story small-scale wood dependency of indeterminate use and age
17. Rear, 8039 Sharpsburg Pike: Single-story, two-bay automobile garage with gable roof and gable end orientation to the street
18. Rear, 8039 Sharpsburg Pike: Two-story barn of wood construction with laterally-oriented gable roof; exterior finished in vertical boards
19. 8031 Sharpsburg Pike: Two-story vernacular residence of wood construction set upon a coursed rubble foundation with a laterally-oriented gable roof of standing-seam metal; five-bay facade with interior gable-end chimneys; windows flat-topped, 2/2 and 1/1 lights, with operable wood shutters; two of the windows on the left side of the facade have been replaced by a one-story bay window with paneled bulkheads above and below the windows; across the entire facade is a single-story hipped-roof wood porch supported by Doric columns, set singly and in pairs; 6-light paired gable windows; one-story stone addition at rear (c. 1900)
20. Rear, 8031 Sharpsburg Pike: 1½-story gable-roofed outbuilding of wood construction with a lean-to addition

- stone with a three-bay facade; windows are flat-topped, with some replacement sash occurring along with the historic 2/2-light windows; laterally-oriented gable roof with standing seam metal cladding (c. 1840)
24. Rear, 8021 Sharpsburg Pike: one-story wood-frame dependency with T-111 cladding, with resultant loss of integrity (NC) [owner may be Barr Hammond]
25. 8021 Sharpsburg Pike: two-story vernacular residence of wood frame, completely clad in T-111, with a resultant loss of integrity (NC)
26. 8019 Sharpsburg Pike: two-story vernacular residence of brick, with some reference to Federal-style design, including its three-bay facade with the main entrance offset on the left side; the first-story windows retain some original 6-light sash; the second-story windows are of a shorter scale, 3/3 lights. The building has a laterally-oriented gable roof with asphalt replacement roofing and interior gable-end chimneys. Additions have been made on the south side of the building including a gable-roofed addition to which has been appended a hipped-roof addition (c. 1830)
27. 8015 Sharpsburg Pike: two-story vernacular residence of masonry with a stuccoed exterior finish; interior gable-end chimneys and laterally-oriented gable roof; windows are flat-topped, 2/2 lights, with modest molded window heads; the shed-roofed front porch has been enclosed (c. 1840)
28. Side, 8015 Sharpsburg Pike: rectilinear shed-roofed board-and-batten outbuilding of indeterminate age and usage
29. Rear, 8015 Sharpsburg Pike: one-story gable-roofed outbuilding with standing seam metal roof; of indeterminate age and usage
30. Rear, 8015 Sharpsburg Pike: one-story gable-roofed outbuilding with standing seam metal roof; of indeterminate age and usage
31. 8013 Sharpsburg Pike (Bloom's General Store): 1½-story vernacular commercial building of wood frame, clad in simulated asphalt stone, built on a foundation of fieldstone and capped with a hipped roof; the three-bay facade incorporates two residential-scaled windows with paneled wood shutters; at the right front corner an angled entrance to the building is set beneath a recessed porch. The original double entry doors are intact, each with two solid panels below a large glass upper panel; the doorway includes a three-light transom (c. 1880)
32. Rear, 8013 Sharpsburg Pike: hipped-roofed wood barn set on a foundation of rock-faced stone with automobile garage space on the first floor; some artificial siding
33. 8011 Sharpsburg Pike (Joseph Bloom House): 2½-story eclectic residence of wood construction with synthetic stone cladding on the first story and synthetic siding on the second story, with a resultant loss of integrity (NC)
34. 8007 Sharpsburg Pike: two-story vernacular residence of wood with a laterally-oriented gable roof and interior gable-end chimneys; three-bay facade with centered entry
35. 8005 Sharpsburg Pike: two-story vernacular residence of wood construction, with a laterally-oriented gable roof; four-bay facade with replacement windows; exterior clad in synthetic siding; the front porch has been enclosed and a brick addition has been constructed, with a resultant loss of integrity (NC)

public-private

Tilghmanton is a small 19th century village consisting of for the most part two story sided log houses. The settlement was named for Col. Frisby Tilghman a wealthy and prominent land owner in the area during the late 18th and early 19th centuries. He lived in a large mansion about two miles north of Tilghmanton. In J. Thomas Scharf's History of Western Maryland, it is stated that Col. Tilghman laid out the town into lots for poor people.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Tilghmanton is a small village which lies on both sides of Maryland Route 65 nearly halfway between Hagerstown and Sharpsburg in Washington County. The town is almost a half mile in length with houses placed quite close to the road's edge.

The houses for the most part are small log structures with various forms of sheathing, usually German siding. Most of the dwellings are two or three bays in length with main entrances in the front facade. A very few of the houses off the main road have exposed log walls covered with white wash.

For the most part the village is residential, a small general store being one of the few commercial establishments. The buildings are generally in good condition.
